

That Dirty “V” Word

We know. We get it.

Cameras in the back of classrooms; teachers that are hard to see and hear; instruction that seems to drone on whether you are involved or not.

But virtual camp is NOT that!

As last year’s campers (and their parents/caregivers) can tell you, it blew away those misconceptions and replaced them with interesting and interactive activities! Like an outdoor pirate treasure hunt, martial arts and other fitness experiences, adventure in cooking, singing, dancing and creating!

After all, the only real limits are in our minds! And people with behavior challenges actually do BETTER virtually than in-person...no bugs, blistering heat or other annoying stimuli.

So, please...don’t let your loved one stare out the window all summer!

Just like our friends and neighbors with disabilities, “virtual” just needs a chance to show what it can do!
